

DANIEL YEE WEISHAN, 3.9
ANGLO-CHINESE SCHOOL (INDEPENDENT)

I chose this design as it depicts a road, which is a very common and necessary thing in life. Although roads are man-made, this depicts a road crossing a body of water, depicted by the straight lines, and on to solid land. Thus it depicts something man-made bridging across two very different forms of nature. From this, I have learnt that many different effects can be achieved on the graphing function, not only by changing the equation, but also the type of line drawn by each particular equation.