In the light of increasing awareness about global warming, I think a hat is an essential part of fashion these days. This type of “cowboy hats” was popular in the 1950s and it is a very good protector against the sunlight and the UV light. The decorations were made based on Mandelbrot’s self-similarity concept which is highly relevant to our chaotic world and fashion. Fashion always revolves around the same concept and structure throughout the years. It always repeats the same trend after a period of time. Overall, the most important feature of fashion is that it looks nice.
