METHODIST GIRLS' SCHOOL

I chose this design to remind myself of the aggressive nature of sports. This was inspired by my class' interest in soccer, undaunted by the scratches and bruises we get after every match. In the picture, the soccer player uses his head to navigate the ball away from the goalpost; there is pain clearly expressed on his face but that does not stop him from preventing his opponents to score a goal. Through this, I recall how the marksmanship of a good sportsman is his will to win the game regardless of the pain it may cost.
