A sport's popularity varies from one country to another. Back in the Philippines, the most played sport is basketball. So it surprised me when I learned that majority of the people here in Singapore are more inclined to football. I chose it as my design to compare the popularity of the two sports between these countries. Yet, however different they may be, both seem to give its audience a satisfying entertainment.

I have learnt to draw graphs of numerous expressions as well as familiarise myself with the different functions of the calculator. I was also able to apply my knowledge in math, not only to solve problems but also to make a design.
